

Discovering Your Roots: An Introduction to Genealogy

As part of its yearlong focus on celebrating family heritage, the Columbia Historical Society is pleased to offer a free three class course introducing the methods and resources available to anyone interested in researching their family history.

Do you want to find out who your ancestors were and what their lives were like?

Are you interested in connecting with living relatives you might never have met?

Do you have old family photos you hope to identify?

Would you like to find out whether those old family stories are really true?

Being a family history detective (a genealogist) can be a fun way to answer questions like these and more.

Classes will be held at 2 PM on May 3, May 31, and June 14 at the Saxton B. Little Library 319 Rt. 87 Columbia

Enrollment is limited to twelve persons and pre-registration is required. To register or for more information contact:
